

PRO ENFORCEMENT IN JULY PROBLEM

Commissioner Roper States
That District Attorneys
Alone Must Act.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Enforcement of war-time prohibition, which becomes effective July 1, is not lodged with the internal revenue bureau or with any other government agency, but merely is left to United States Attorneys Daniel C. Roper, revenue commissioner, declares after analysis of all statutes and regulations.

Intimation that because of the apparent difficulty of enforcement, the president or congress might be called on to postpone the law's operations, was given by Mr. Roper in a statement saying that "the issue of enforcement for the manufacture prohibited by the war-time prohibition act will naturally cease with July 1, assuming, of course, that neither the president nor congress stays the operation of the law."

It is in connection with it that a number of administration officials and advisers of the president have recently urged him to prevent prohibition from going into effect July 1 by proclaiming the completion of demobilization by that time. This view is understood to be held by Mr. Roper, who is represented as believing prohibition can not be enforced adequately without specific legislation establishing an enforcement agency.

No Provision for Enforcement.

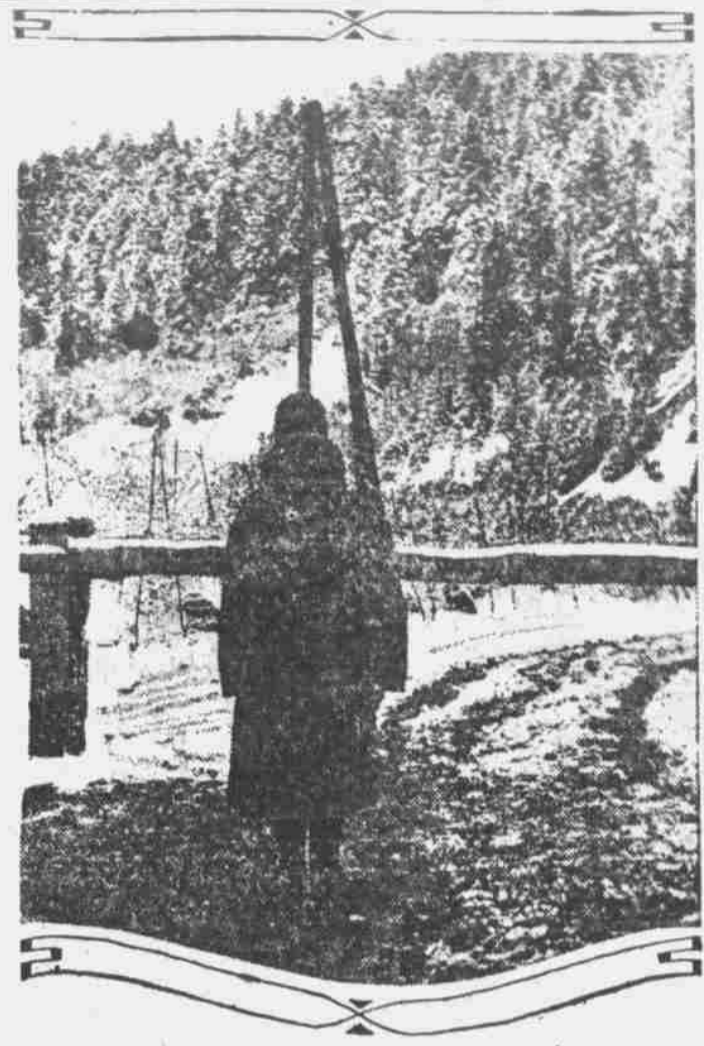

After explaining in a statement that congress had failed to pass bills authorizing administration of the war-time prohibition provision of the agricultural bill approved last November 21, Mr. Roper said:

Enforcement of the prohibition contained in the act, therefore, is not placed with the commissioner of internal revenue or lodged anywhere in the war-time prohibition provision of the agricultural bill approved last November 21, Mr. Roper said.

GUARD OF FIRST LINE HAS WEARY JOB AFTER ARMISTICE IS SIGNED

Italian sentry guarding the advanced line gained by the allies at the time the armistice was signed.

It is commonplace and monotonous work guarding the border rail of the advanced battle line when there are no more battles. The photograph shows a lone Italian sentry on guard at the border rail of the advanced line gained by the allies at the time of the signing of the armistice. Immediately ahead are a bit more peaceful than those formerly spent dodging foe bullets.

statute of prohibition between July 1 and Jan. 16, when the prohibition constitutional amendment becomes effective. Some officials add this uncertainty might be partially removed by enforcement legislation if a special session of congress is called soon, although revenue bureau officials doubt whether an adequate force of agents could be whipped into shape between the passage of such legislation, even if it were speeded through congress, and July 1.

It now develops that the revenue bureau will be unable to assign all of its 3,000 revenue agents to liquor work owing to this necessity of employing most of these men on tax collecting business. Reports that 3,000 agents would be assigned to prohibition enforcement work after July 1 now appear erroneous in the light of the revenue commission's decision that he has not authority nor appropriations necessary to carry out the task.

Mr. Roper and Mr. Glass, secretary of the treasury, have always been opposed to lodging in the bureau the function of enforcing prohibition measures and have suggested that the department of justice is the proper agency for this work. The enforcement of revenue measures which remain on the statute books, regardless of the advent of prohibition on July 1, will not constitute an adequate policing of the country as far as making prohibition of the manufacture of liquor absolutely effective, or even counting near it, revenue officials now explain. Campaigns against moonshiners, which heretofore have engaged a large force of revenue agents, have been very limited in scope as compared with the nationwide violations looked for after prohibition goes into effect for the entire country.

BOLSHEVİK ATROCITIES ARE NOT EXAGGERATED

LONDON, April 24. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Reports of Bolshevik atrocities in the Perm district which have dealt largely in generalities now have been supplemented by statements of results of an investigation by Siberian authorities which British officials regard as authentic. They dealt with 122 specific cases of death and torture and the examination of 52 bodies of persons alleged to have been killed by Bolsheviks.

One of the worst cases described is that of a girl of 19 years, who was changed in December, 1918, with espionage. She was tortured by being pierced 13 times in the same wound with a bayonet. She lived, however, and has made an affidavit to these details.

At Ekaterinburg 18 persons were shot at the sewage dump on Jan. 29 last, despite protests of consuls there, says the Siberian report. The consuls were told that the victims met death in revenge for the killing of one Malshchik, who lost his life in a battle with the Czechs.

Of 500 priests in the Perm diocese the report says, 46 have been killed. Two monasteries were pillaged. Examination of the 52 bodies, the authorities say, shows a preponderance of bayonet wounds in the back, but in other instances mouths were slit, fingers and hands cut off and the heads of the victims smashed.

SPARTACANS-BOLSHEVİK ARE FEW IN NUMBERS

BERNE, April 24.—An inquiry conducted at Bremen has revealed the fact that the Spartacus-Bolshevik group in that city numbered between 700 and 800 men, writes a Berlin correspondent. This comparatively insignificant number of armed desperadoes were able to dictate their will to a population of 200,000, and to bring about a reign of terror for several weeks before troops sent from Berlin liberated the inhabitants from their tyranny.

SAYS BOLSHEVISM SOCIALIST THEORY MISINTERPRETED

Russian Heroine, Now Touring
America, Discusses
Present Movement in Her Home Country.

Mme. Katherine Breshkovskaya, that famous old Russian woman known as the grandmother of the Russian revolution, and a leader in the socialist-revolutionary movement, is now touring the United States and lecturing on "What is Bolshevism?" The following is her explanation in part:

"Nothing in the world is so old as that which is now called 'Bolshevism.' The history of every nation or least civilized people testifies that there has not been a theory, a religion or a philosophy that has not been discarded, misinterpreted or even abused, betrayed in its deepest meaning and ideal."

"We see now that the harmonious, humane, well-shaped theory of socialism, founded on science, the theory that teaches us what reform and changes can be successfully made at this or that moment of history, endeavoring to make these changes with as little distress as possible and conserving all that is good from the culture of the past—we see this theory, the theory of socialism perverted into an appeal for defiance, vengeance, robbery, destruction and the immediate murder of anyone resisting these atrocities. And at what a time! It came at the moment when the true socialists, the real workers for the people, were so near their aim, when all the desired reforms could have been easily realized, as the people are prepared for them."

"Two years ago we had in Russia, through the legislation of our provisional government, the best laws insuring political freedom, freedom of conscience, of speech, of press of assembly. We had equality of political rights for both sexes, and autonomy for all the nationalities inhabiting Russia. If the constituent assembly had not been dispersed by the Bolshevik bayonets, the land would have been in the possession of those who till it, on the basis of socialism. The workmen of Russia would be living under the protection of the law."

"But there was a plot against this program, and as it would have been impossible to overthrow it by arms, the Bolsheviks made use of a ruse. By double-dealing they lured into our ignorance and many times disappointed masses that again they would be deceived, and that the only means to secure the success of the revolution was to act at once. 'Rob the robbers' was the slogan they put it."

Sets Fire to Fuel.

"It was a match in the dry fuel of discontent and suffering, of servitude and desolation. For 16 months Russia has been burning in the fire of anarchy, and Lenin flatters it as a triumph of socialism without any feeling for humanity without any sense of justice or responsibility toward God or mankind."

"Such things cannot be conceived by anyone or anything since their fanaticism is based on selfishness and obstinacy, and they consider themselves above the law of God and man, even the results testifying to their mistakes and errors do not change their course. Their activities, if the mission for destruction and murder can be so called, Lenin's policy, not that of a sane man, and kidding himself in these policies of incessant terror and violence, it cannot be that he enjoys a normal state of mind and spirit."

"The absurdity and criminality of the Bolshevik terrorism is so evident that some sincere elements, most of them very young people, who joined the Bolsheviks at the beginning, have left the ranks of their party and by their denunciations, have left the Bolsheviks in a very bad position. A very small minority over a great people, through armed force, and therefore the longer Lenin stays in power the more possible becomes the return to Russia of a normal reaction. The monarchists of Russia, although they are very small in number, are becoming bolder day by day, and we, the Russian democrats, must now fight two fronts against Lenin and the Bolsheviks of czarism."

Peasantry Hope of Russia.

"There is one hope for Russia, and a very strong one, that is our peasantry. This class could long endure the chaos brought about by Bolshevism. Traditionally, they are religious, honest, and they will finally tear the stratum of strong characters and the body of Russia and prove their ability to be good citizens of their country and true friends to their countrymen."

"Russia will exist and prosper if that there is no doubt. But at this hour she is racked by the suffering and death of her people, through the aim of the past and present despotism, supported by the evil will of the Bolsheviks, who are determined to rule, to rule under their feet all the country and true friends to their countrymen."

DEAD REDS LOADED ON WAGONS
DURING FIGHTING IN BERLIN

Upper photograph shows Bolshevik dead being thrown upon flat carts to be carried away and buried, while beneath are seen nurses administering to the wounded.

These are critical times for the Weimar government, for the threatening Bolsheviks are arising on every side. The soviet congress is meeting under exciting circumstances and there is continuous fighting through the streets. It is predicted that the Ebert government at Weimar will fall when the peace treaty is signed, the opposition merely biding their time so that the odium of signing the treaty will fall on the Ebert faction.
